Why a show on garbage? Is there any point in considering refuse and waste?

The five artists in our show seem to think so: they seem to have found a method to process the detritus and waste which we usually ignore and to extract aesthetic meaning and emotion from it. They use junk mail or discarded packaging to construct cityscapes; they photograph rubbish, paint dirt, and record wastelands on video and make art out of litter. The resulting work is diverse in form and feeling, but all of it asks us to consider junk as the archaeological strata of our time.
